

What it means to be a TG pupil

These past seven years have gone really quickly: the first day of this warm and inviting school only seems like yesterday. My first day was very daunting, but this place grew upon me to become my second home. For me it means that I know I can fail and if I do, I will never be judged. I also know that I belong to TG because perseverance is key and that we will never be left alone. How has TG shaped me as an individual? Well, I have become more organised in a way that I never thought I would be.

Memories:

I had many different experiences throughout my seven years at TG. I have had so many that I can't decide! Aha! I remember a time last autumn when we went to The Black Country Museum. Whilst we were there we were lucky enough to go down the mines which, some of us found a little creepy. I found the mines weirded me out but, it soon grew on me. Once it grew on me I found it very exciting to be down there.

Conclusion:

For me TG has been an experience that I could never forget even if I am not surrounded by my day-to-day friends and teachers. Even though my last seven years have ended in a more peculiar way, I will never forget my happiness here.
